

The background image shows the interior of a bakery. It features a high ceiling with a corrugated metal roof and exposed wooden beams. Several large, cylindrical pendant lights hang from the ceiling. The walls are made of light-colored stone tiles. On the left, there are wooden shelves displaying various breads. In the foreground, a glass display case filled with pastries is visible. On the right, there is a counter area with more shelves and a small oven or machine.

BURNT ENDS BAKERY

Burnt Ends Bakery, located in Dempsey Hill, combines rustic charm with modern design, featuring stone slab tiles and a minimalist concrete counter. An extension of the Michelin-starred Burnt Ends restaurant, it stands out as Singapore's only bakery with a custom wood-fired oven. The space includes an outdoor seating area that doubles as an event venue with a bar and barbecue setup.

The bakery offers a range of delicious sweet and savoury treats, including popular wood-fired sourdough loaves and filled brioche doughnuts. It also serves savoury beef pies and whole tarts in the afternoon, with items available in limited quantities on a first-come, first-served basis.
